Food for thought with food

How can both liveryies work together to unlock innovation which supports the Livery Climate Action agenda?

The evening will consist of some opening remarks by each Master followed by provocative talks by Bill Creedon from the insurance world and Paul Sheedy from the construction technology sector.

The evening will be moderated by an adjudicator who will brief everyone on the protocols of the evening.

The guests will then work on ideas over dinner to answer questions on the following slide which will unlock innovation supporting the climate action strategy of the Livery Climate Action Group.

A report of the outputs will be published (Chatham House Rules) and widely distributed.

The event has a capacity of 70, 35 from Insurance and 35 from Construction.

Key Themes

Following the opening remarks by the Masters and guest speakers then everyone will be asked to discuss the following questions on their table;

- What are the barriers to delivering innovation which supports sustainability and climate action?
- How can these barriers be removed?
- What can we do together to accelerate change in sustainability of the built environment?
